

doctrine, and is privileged (see D.I. 192).

Having now reviewed in camera the documents submitted by UAT that would be responsive to Categories 2 and 3, and having considered the parties' various filings (including undocketed letters²), IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that, for the reasons stated below, AT&T's motion to compel discovery responsive to Categories 2 and 3 is DENIED.

1. Discoverability of litigation funding materials under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 26 is a contested issue on which there is no binding precedent in the Third Circuit. See In re Valsartan N-Nitrosodimethylamine (NDMA) Contam. Prod. Liab. Lit., 405 F. Supp. 3d 612, 615 (D.N.J. 2019) (collecting cases and agreeing "with the plethora of authority that holds that discovery directed to a plaintiff's litigation funding is irrelevant"). Generally, when confronted with this sort of dispute, close consideration of the subject matter in the disputed documents (e.g., through in camera review) is a prudent approach. See, e.g., ART+COM Innovationpool GmbH v. Google, Inc., C.A. 14-217 D.I. 196 (D. Del. Sept. 11, 2015) (finding, after in camera review, agreements with plaintiff's litigation financiers were irrelevant). That is the course the Court has followed here.

2. Having undertaken this review, the Court has concluded that AT&T has failed to meet the threshold requirement to show that the litigation funding-related discovery it seeks here is relevant. See Invensas Corp. v. Renesas Elecs. Corp., 2013 WL 12146531, at *2 (D. Del. May 8, 2013) ("When a party objects to discovery requests, the burden falls on the party seeking the discovery to show the relevance of the information requested.") (further citation omitted). In support of relevance, AT&T points to Acceleration Bay LLC v. Activision Blizzard, Inc., 2018

² UAT filed letters dated December 26, 2019 and January 31, 2020, while AT&T filed a letter dated January 23, 2020. These letters are presently not on the docket. The parties should docket them (with appropriate redactions should they believe redactions are warranted).

WL 798731, at *3 (D. Del. Feb. 9, 2018), for the broad proposition that communications with prospective sources of funding, as well as subsequent litigation updates to eventual funders, are “relevant to central issues like validity and infringement, valuation, damages, royalty rates, and whether plaintiff is an operating company.”³ (See D.I. 191 at 3; see also D.I. 238 at 7) But Acceleration Bay does not hold (as no case could) that such materials are always relevant, without any consideration of additional factors.

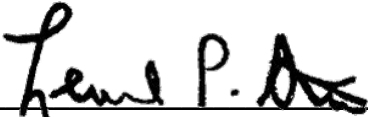

3. In the instant case, AT&T merely speculates that the reasons underlying the order requiring production in Acceleration Bay are also present here. But AT&T fails to articulate how documents within the scope of Categories 2 and 3 are relevant to the specific claims or defenses of this case. (See D.I. 238 at 8) (“Obviously, we have not seen these documents, so we don’t know exactly what they contain, but generally the Acceleration Bay case holds that they are relevant.”). Simply put, AT&T has not met its burden to show the relevance of the documents it seeks. See generally Micro Motion, Inc. v. Kane Steel Co., Inc., 894 F.2d 1318, 1326 (Fed. Cir. 1990) (“[R]equested information is not relevant to ‘subject matter involved’ in the pending action if the inquiry is based on the party’s mere suspicion or speculation [D]iscovery may be denied where, in the court’s judgment, the inquiry lies in a speculative area.”).

4. Further, having reviewed the numerous documents submitted for in camera review by UAT, the Court finds that they do not appear to be relevant to any issue in this case.⁴

5. As AT&T has failed to carry its burden on relevance, the Court need not, and does not, address the parties' various additional disputes relating to work-product doctrine, attorney-client privilege, common interest, parent-child privilege, and spousal privilege.
